

ADIAM TSEGAI, PH.D.

Dr. Adiam Tsegai has earned a Ph. D. in Social Foundations, specializing in Comparative and Global Studies in Education, as well as the M.Ed. in General Education with a major focus on Public Education from the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Tsegai's major research focus centers on high school student drop out rates, issues in urban education, retention rates, and the significance of the contribution of learning environments within our social and educational institutions. Her research specializes on the concerns of first through fifth semester students who are attending proprietary, associate degree granting colleges, as part of the federally-sponsored Ability to Benefit (ATB) program, and how they are affected by their prior experiences in high school and their transition to the college environment. She is currently the Dean of Instruction at the City Campus of Bryant & Stratton College, Buffalo, New York, and an adjunct instructor within the Graduate School of Education at the State University of New York at Buffalo.
